WHEELING, MARCH 18, 1898.

A Diplomat's Brilliant Idea.

Some of the "distinguished" diplomats of Europe, in discussing the strained relations between Spain and the United States, are just now displaying some profound ignorance of this country and its conditions. If a comic opera author were to rack his brain to originate something ridiculous he could not frame anything more execrably funny than the following, which is attributed to "a distinguished diplomat" in a cablegram from Berlin: "In the event of war between Spain and the United States," says this distinguished German "authority," "the former would send an army of 200,000 men into the United States, divide the troops into four invading forces of 50,000 men each, and make a simultaneous land attack."

It is unfortunate that this "distinguished diplomat," who has been so generous as to inform us of Spain's plan, has not been friendly enough to tell us just what this army of 200,000 Spanish troops is going to land, and the route the four separate forces will take in their triumphant march over this continent. And, while he was about it, he might have given us some hints as to what the armies of the United States would be doing all this time. Of course the hundreds of thousands of American troops that could be raised inside of a few days would be sleeping somewhere, but we would like to know from this "distinguished diplomat" who views matters from Berlin where they would be taking the nap. Of course, also, Spain's army of 200,000 men would sneak quietly out of that country, cross the Atlantic ocean, a distance of 3,000 miles, and quietly sneak into the United States without anything being known of it on this side of the water. As a mere matter of charity, the "distinguished diplomat" should have furnished us with a bill of particulars concerning the proposed coup.

The United States doesn't want to be caught napping by an army equivalent in numbers and fighting qualities to that which has been crushing a little poorly equipped band of 50,000 insurgents on the impoverished island of Cuba, and is still as far from accomplishing its purpose as it was three years ago, when the Spanish government promised it would be done within a few weeks. This "distinguished diplomat" in Europe has a very profound and intelligent knowledge of the situation, the wonderful ability of a Spanish army and the utter incapacity of the United States. Spain and the United States are badly in need of that "distinguished" Berlin diplomat to assist them in settling the unpleasantness that may be precipitated at any moment.

A Disgraceful Record.

The legislature which has just died has done all that it could to send the Democratic party to a dishonored grave. It is the comment of the Democratic Louisville Courier Journal on the adjournment of the Democratic legislature of Kentucky. The history of legislative bodies in this country does not furnish the equal of this Bryanite body for rank partisan enactments, the over-riding of popular rights, violations of faith to constituents, and direct blows at a Republican form of government.

Among the last acts performed was the killing of an anti-trust law, a bill to repeal a mob law, the passage over the governor's veto of the act to place the entire election machinery in the hands of the silver faction of the Democracy, the legislation out of office of a sheriff who had given advertising to a gold Democratic newspaper, the adoption of a resolution calling for the resignation of a United States senator for opposing a silver proposition in Congress, and many other outrages too numerous to mention. And all this done in the name of the "new" Democracy, the dominant element of the Democratic party, which claims to be the especial champion of the people, and which voted with the open boast that the intention was to make it impossible for the state of Kentucky to ever again go Republican.

No wonder the Courier Journal, edited by honest Henry Watterson, is moved to utter the exclamation quoted above. And no wonder it is that this same staunch Democratic journal is moved to pay the following deserved tribute to the Republican governor of Kentucky, who, from first to last, did his best to stand between the free-booters who compose this most remarkably un-American legislature and the rights of the people: "Unparalleled as is the record which the legislature leaves," says the Courier Journal, "it would have been worse had not there been in the executive chair a governor vigilant to see his duty, and courageous to do it. He was powerless for much good, but he was able to do the state some service, and he was ever willing to do it. For this he will have the thanks of patriotic Kentuckians, whatever be their party."

It cannot be possible that the people of Kentucky, notwithstanding the infamous plan arranged for the carrying of the state by foul means for the Bryan Democracy, will endorse the disgraceful record that has been made. The honest people, the chivalrous men of the old blue grass state, will thoroughly endorse Mr. Watterson's declaration, in view of the unparalleled record for dishonest partisanship that has been made, that "Political parties are useful and necessary, but political parties must mean more than a piratical raid upon office. Political parties cannot sink fairness and honesty, and themselves float."

Battleship West Virginia.

Several days ago the Intelligencer's Washington dispatches told of Congressman Dayton's efforts to have one of the new battleships named "West Virginia," and of the encouragement he had received from the navy department to hope that the suggestion would receive favorable consideration. Mr. Dayton's position on the house committee on naval affairs gives him influence at the department. The movement which has been started by the Ohio county commissioners looking to a concerted effort on the part of all sections of the state to aid in the matter, and to further the cause before the naval authorities, has met with a ready endorsement by the citizens. A systematic movement of this character should be effected and the Ohio county promoters have gone about the matter in the right way, their action being seconded last night by the Wheeling board of education.

Mr. Dayton having already brought the suggestion before the secretary of the navy, this voluntary action on the part of the board of county commissioners yesterday will bring to the attention of the secretary the fact that he represents a public desire in the state that West Virginia should have the honor. Other counties will doubtless take similar action, and the entire West Virginia delegation in Congress will join with the Second district representative in urging that such a recognition of West Virginia be granted. No state is more deserving, and none will show greater appreciation of the privilege of furnishing a name for one of Uncle Sam's splendid fighting ships. Let the movement be pushed forward.

Autonomy in Spain's Eyes.

Spain's sudden revival of her talk about the beauties of the plan of autonomy which she has been unsuccessfully trying to inaugurate in Cuba is for the purpose of gaining sympathy from the other powers in Europe, but it will fail of its purpose, if the European statesmen have seen close observers of the effort. Her attempt to make it appear that the attitude of this country is responsible for the failure thus far is as weak and as cowardly as it is possible to imagine. In view of the fact that the administration has given her every opportunity to make a thorough test of the policy.

Autonomy as Spain has conceived it for Cuba has been a wonderful thing of many sides, and her suggestion now of an improved plan will doubtless be received with indifference. A writer on the subject in the New York Press says he is irresistibly reminded of the parody in which the account of the noble Hia-watha and the conquered Mudjokivis appears:

With the skin he made him mittens;
Made them with the fur side inside;
Made them with the skin side outside;
He, to get the warm side inside,
Put the inside skin outside;
He, to get the cold side outside,
Put the warm side, fur side, inside.
That's why he put the fur side inside,
Why he put the skin side outside,
Why he turned them inside outside.

Two Patent Facts.

Here are two propositions laid down by the Democratic Philadelphia Record that are indisputable. They are not original propositions, but are valuable and should be kept constantly in mind by the workmen of this country:

"First. The countries which have for years past been practically gold standard countries are the countries in which the highest wages are paid to labor.

"Second. The countries which have but recently adopted the gold standard, or which still cling to the silver standard, are countries in which the wages of labor are lowest and the condition of workmen most abject."

These are simple facts that outweigh all the theories concerning the benefits of a silver standard to the wage workers. Men may theorize and theorize, and paint in graphic colors the beauties of a silver standard, but they cannot overcome the truth of these statements which only need investigation, the material for which is easily obtainable, for their confirmation.

The fire in Chicago Wednesday, in which a number of people lost their lives and many were injured, due to an explosion occurring during the progress of the conflagration, was another sad lesson in the recklessness of storing explosives in the crowded business quarters of a city. In this feature the calamity was similar to that which recently occurred in Pittsburgh. In the Chicago case no less than 400 persons were employed in the building which contained chemicals of a highly explosive nature. The only wonder is that the death list is not longer. The frequency of such occurrences should call attention to the necessity for municipal regulation of the storage of explosives.

General Grosvenor sets at rest some of the wild speculations that have been rife since the publication of his views on the Cuban situation, by stating that he was speaking only for himself and was not expressing the views of the administration, as had been asserted by more than one yellow journal.

A striking example of the sensational journalism which is doing more harm than good in the present situation between Spain and the United States is afforded by one of our eastern exchanges. Its leading news feature, displayed in advertising type under "sacred headlines," is a dispatch that the report of the Maine board of inquiry has been received in Washington and is of a most startling nature. An official denial by Secretary Long of the truth of the statement appears in the same edition of this sensational journal, but, alas for the credit of the peculiar and dangerous type of journalism which it now so rampant, this important denial is printed in an obscure corner of a less prominent page of the paper.

The March number of Events, issued yesterday, was filled with patriotism as well as with other things pleasing to the reader. Events seems to have imbibed the spirit of the day growing out of the war crisis which has stirred up the national pride throughout the country, and, aside from well written articles on the Spanish-American situation, gives evidence of its devotion to the flag on its title page, which is printed in the national colors and contains the inspiring legend, "Three cheers for the red, white and blue!" The literary features and the society, musical and other regular departments are unusually interesting.

"St. Patrick's Day in the morning" was a beauty, and the beauty was not confined to the morning. Perfect spring weather, following a storm of the night previous which threatened to continue into the day, was a welcome blessing to those who observed the occasion.

Spain wants to know why we are assembling our warships at Key West. Is Spain serious in making this request?

STATE PRESS GLEANINGS.

Heirs of the late Governor Samuel Price, of Lexington, are receiving $40 a day royalty on the output of their coal mine in Fayette county, all of which they are applying to further opening and improvement of the property.

Robert Davis, aged 96 years, died at Camp, Doddridge county, last week, leaving eight children, sixty-four grandchildren, and ninety-six great-grandchildren. Eight of his children, seven of his grandchildren, and twenty-nine of his great-grandchildren died before the death of their ancestor. The family left by Mr. Davis is the largest on record in this state—West Union Herald.

A Democratic wool buyers from Harrison county was here last week and interviewed a number of our farmers. When asked by a representative of the Independent how this year's wool prices would compare with last year's, he replied that the highest price paid last year was seventeen cents a pound, and that he was already offering twenty cents this year. Even at this price farmers are not willing to dispose of this year's clip, and none ask less than twenty-two cents a pound. We noticed a prominent Democratic farmer who had caught the spirit of better prices under Republican rule and who openly expressed the opinion that wool will sell this year at from twenty-three to twenty-six cents a pound. It is even so—"Times Have Improved some."—Weston Independent.

Jesse Thomas and wife, each about 90 years old, died at their home on Deepwood creek, a tributary of Meadow river, about ten days ago. For years and years they have made their home in the lonely little hut, where they died. They had lived sparingly, husbanding their accumulations to the last cent. It has been said by some that they even stined themselves of food and clothing. Since their death a bag of money, containing $3,000 in paper money and over $200 in gold has been found on the premises. Neighbors believe that there is yet a large amount of silver money hid away somewhere about the house.—Fayette Republican.

The venerable John Snider, of near Tunnelton, was here one day last week. He had just disposed of his wool clip of five seasons and declares that he is just seventy dollars better off by reason of the effect of the Dingley tariff bill on the wool trade, having received that much, after deducting interest and storage, above any price offered for his clip under the Wilson bill.—Preston County Journal.

Seven swans came to Hammonds, on Williams river, says the Pocahontas Times. At first they were supposed to be wild and three were shot. Four remain and are very tame. Whence they came is a mystery, for if of the wild species their behavior is most unusual; besides the swan in a wild state is almost extinct. The domesticated swan, if it flies at all, would scarcely come so far from any place where they are known to exist.

Mr. Aaron Moore is the owner of a fine and well worked sugar camp. He has manufactured sugar as long as he can remember, nearly sixty years, without missing a single season, not excepting the war. On the place is an old kettle used in the manufacture of sugar for 100 years. Another kettle has been in constant use for sixty years. It is agreed that walnut makes the most enduring troughs. In this camp is a trough made from a section of a tree cut to furnish shingles for the Marlinton bridge. It has been exposed to all weathers for forty-two years and is still serviceable.—Pocahontas Times.

At His Very Best.

Moundsville Herald: The March number of "Events" contains a splendidly written article and declares that he is a "London Fog" by A. W. Campbell. This article is worth the price of the magazine. Mr. Campbell, always charming and faultless in his style, is in this article, at his very best. One imagines he can behold the scenes and hear the sounds of the world's metropolis during that terrible fog as one reads Mr. Campbell's thrilling and imitable description.

Sound Money Discussions.

Between now and the next presidential election there will be hosts of discussions of the questions of "sound money" and silver. However, opinions may be divided on these points, there is but one public and professional opinion, and that is a favorable one, regarding the merits of Hottel's Stomach Bitters as a remedy for and preventive of malaria, as well as a curative of kidney complaint, dyspepsia, constipation, liver trouble and rheumatism.

DR. WOOD'S Norway Pine Syrup seems especially adapted to the needs of the children. Pleasant to take; soothing in its influence. It is the remedy of all remedies for every form of throat and lung disease.

FELIX ADLER TO MOTHERS.

He Tells How to Judge What the Children Should Read.

New York Times: "I am one of those who, all things considered, believe in fairy tales," said Felix Adler at the Mothers' Congress yesterday. The question had been put to him by Mrs. Almon Hensley, who had charge of the exercises for the day, at the beginning of his address upon moral training for children.

"Nothing should be put into the hands of a child," Prof. Adler went on, "which has not first been read by the parents."

"Some of Grimm's stories are good—not all—and some of Anderson's. I should not have you take anything on authority. When you start out with a theory, you can enter it into the list of things to be used only as a convenient hypothesis for study."

"We have so many, and yet so few, books for children. We have been living heretofore on what was produced when the human race was in its infancy, so it is suited for the children. Now we need literature for children—some writer who can enter into the thought of a child. Robert Louis Stevenson has done this admirably."

"It is only the blessedly ignorant who can give you a cut-and-dried system of instruction. The subject is only beginning to be studied. In a general way I believe that all education is an orderly effort on the part of adults to assist the child in gaining physical, mental and moral freedom. The effort to free the moral freedom must go hand in hand with the physical and mental. According to my idea it should be given in day schools and not reserved for Sunday."

"I believe in emphasizing the authority of the parent—that is right which the parent approves. Later, that is right which public sentiment approves, that is in the school; there is a wonderful power in opinion in the school. Then, when the child comes to a recognition of his own individuality, he finds a motive in his breast and says: 'That is right, because my reason tells me it is.'"

"I would begin his moral instruction with the Old Testament stories of Moses, David and Jonathan, illustrating traits which he finds in the home. For the next period take up the exalted type of patriotism, justice, honesty, and truth found in the Old Testament in the Hebrew legislation and given with great authority as the basis of society; also the struggles of the Greeks against the Persians; the Roman struggles between patricians and plebeians. Then, as the sense of individuality develops, take up the writings of the Stoics. I have taught the New Testament very earnestly, and with the exception of a few stories, find it too deep for early use. It presupposes a high spiritual standard, and can be better taught to students of 18 or 19."

PASSING PLEASANTIES.

Always in the Mood—"Brusque is a great whilst devotee. I believe." "Great? He is so fond of whilst that his wife never dares speak to him."—Chicago Record.

His Place—Editor—I am afraid it wouldn't be safe to print that. Contributor (apologetically)—I thought perhaps it would be all right for the Sunday edition.—Puck.

Why He Liked Them—"Yes," he said, in those hard tones which betokened a cold-blooded nature, "I am very fond of the old poets." "Why," she exclaimed, "I didn't know you ever read them." "That's why I like them. You can put the old poets up on a shelf in the library where they can't force themselves on your attention, and let them stay there."—Chicago News.

Miss Wellwood—"Yes, I belong to the Daughters of the Revolution, and pride myself upon being the most distinguished member of the society. Mr. Hargrave—Indeed! I suppose you trace your lineage back to some man who was a lion in his day. Oh! Miss Wellwood—No, my great-great-grandfather was only a private, but from all that I can learn he seems to have been the only one in the whole army.—Cleveland Leader.

Hittinger—What's the matter with Tom Diston and Carrie Moore? Rigby—Oh, he's mad with jealousy. The last time he called on her, just before leaving, he said: 'I'm going to have a kiss before I go.' And she said, 'And I'm going to have one after you go.' Tom says he would kill the fellow if he only knew who he was. Hittinger—And who is the fellow? Rigby—Carrie's baby brother; but she says nothing.—Boston Transcript.

No War for Him, Don't want no bullets swishin', For peace is hard ter swishin'. The river's ripe for fishin', An' the birds air singin' sweet; An' the feller falls ter dreamin', With the daisies at ter feet."
